

Dear Hiring Team,

The Senior Analyst, GTM Strategy & Operations role at Crescendo is exactly where my experience and ambitions converge. Tackling complex cross-functional initiatives across Sales, Customer Success, Demand Gen, BizTech, and Finance — that's the breadth of operational work I've been doing throughout my career, and I want to do it at a company that's building the future of AI-powered customer experience.

At RollWorks/AdRoll, I operated at the intersection of sales, marketing, and customer success. My $1.205M in ARR opportunities came from cross-functional GTM execution — not siloed prospecting, but coordinated strategy across teams. I built automated workflows with Clay.com, maintained CRM hygiene for forecasting, and delivered strategic analysis on territory performance and pipeline health. Before that, at loanDepot, I applied the same GTM strategy principles — territory optimization, funnel analysis, process improvement — to reach the top 10% of a 1,000+ originator organization within 8 months.

I know my background skews sales-execution, but 5+ years of the work has been strategic and operational. I've been the person who builds the systems, analyzes the data, and recommends the changes — I just did it while also carrying a number. That dual perspective is an asset for a role that sits across the entire GTM organization: I understand what each function actually needs from ops because I've partnered with all of them.

Crescendo's General Catalyst backing and focus on AI-powered CX is the kind of company where strategic GTM operations can be genuinely transformative. I'd welcome the chance to discuss this further.
