

Dear Hiring Team,

The Senior RevOps Analyst role at PushPress stood out because it's focused on what I care about most: turning marketing and revenue data into insights that actually change how people make decisions. Not just dashboards — strategic recommendations backed by data.

At RollWorks/AdRoll, I built the workflows and reporting that bridged marketing data and sales execution across a 700+ account territory. I automated prospecting with Clay.com and AI, translating marketing engagement signals into prioritized outbound strategy. I maintained CRM hygiene and built KPI tracking that gave leadership confidence in pipeline health reporting. The $1.205M in ARR opportunities came from using data the way RevOps should — connecting upstream marketing activity to downstream revenue outcomes.

The HubSpot proficiency this role requires is central to how I've worked. I've administered and relied on HubSpot and CRM platforms to manage lead lifecycle, track campaign performance, and ensure data integrity across sales and marketing systems. At WeFund Mortgage, I extended this with AI-assisted automation using OpenClaw — building the kind of marketing technology optimizations and data flow improvements that this role formalizes.

I'm drawn to PushPress's 100% remote culture and the scope of this Senior Analyst role. The combination of marketing analytics, revenue reporting, and technology optimization is exactly the work I want to own end-to-end.
