

Dear Hiring Team,

The Lead Sales & Growth Operations Analyst role at Tebra is a perfect match for where I want to take my career. Sitting at the intersection of Sales, Growth, and Revenue — analyzing pipeline efficiency, tracking growth metrics, and connecting operational data to strategy — is exactly the work I've been gravitating toward.

At RollWorks/AdRoll, I generated $1.205M in ARR not through volume but through sales operations rigor. I analyzed funnel data, identified efficiency gaps, and built automated workflows with Clay.com that turned pipeline analytics into scalable outbound strategy. I owned CRM hygiene and forecasting, delivering growth metrics that connected marketing activity to revenue outcomes. Exceeding quota in 15 of 18 months came from the analyst approach this role demands: understanding which pipeline sources convert, which process steps create friction, and where to invest effort for maximum growth efficiency.

I already applied to the Marketing & Growth Operations Analyst role at Tebra because I believe in what you're building for healthcare practices. This Sales & Growth Operations listing caught my attention because the focus on sales efficiency and pipeline analytics is even closer to my core experience. My background at loanDepot — where I reached top 10% of 1,000+ originators by optimizing sales processes and tracking conversion data — demonstrates the kind of sales-adjacent analytical work this role requires.

I'd welcome the chance to discuss how my sales operations experience translates to Tebra's growth analytics needs.

Best regards, Perry Tusler pgtusler@gmail.com | 608-332-9579